Abrahamson, Emmy: How To Fall In Love With A Man Who Lives In A Bush.

You think you know what kind of novel this is, but you'd be wrong. Yes, Julia is a single-girl cliché and yes, a series of disastrous dates has left her despairing of ever finding The One – until Ben sits next to her on a bench. He's tall, dark, handsome...and barefoot, a bit ripe-smelling and of no fixed abode. You guessed it – they fall in love. But can Julia overlook the differences between them?

Krauss, Lawrence M.: The Greatest Story Ever Told... So Far.

This is how the story of the greatest intellectual adventure in history should be introduced – how humanity reached its current understanding of the universe, one that is far removed from the realm of everyday experience. Krauss connects the world we know with the invisible world all around us, which is removed from intuition and direct sensation.

Kumar, Anjali: Stalking God. My Unorthodox Search for Something to Believe In.

Like millions of us, Anjali Kumar, a lawyer for Google, was not religious. But when her daughter was born, Anjali felt compelled to find God-or at least some form of enlightenment-that she could someday impart to her daughter. Knowing that she couldn't simply Google the answer, Anjali set out on a spiritual pilgrimage and nothing was off limits.

Levitsky, Steven; Ziblatt, Daniel: How Democracies Die. What History Tells Us About Our Future.

Two Harvard professors explain how governments collapse and that democracies die in three stages: the election of an authoritarian leader, the concentration and abuse of governmental power and finally, the complete repression of opposition and citizens. The first step was taken by the U.S. with the election of Donald Trump; we must all learn how we can prevent all three.

Levitsky, Steven; Ziblatt, Daniel: How Democracies Die.

Donald Trump's presidency has raised a question that many of us never thought we'd be asking: Is our democracy in danger? Harvard professors Levitsky and Ziblatt have spent two decades studying the breakdown of democracies in Europe and Latin America, and they believe the answer is yes. Drawing on decades of research, Levitsky and Ziblatt show how democracies die–and how ours can be saved.

Eggers, Dave: The Monk of Mokha. Ungekürzte Ausgabe.

Mokhtar Alkhanshali grew up in San Francisco, brought up by Yemeni immigrants. He dreams of resurrecting the ancient art of Yemeni coffee but finds himself trapped in Sana'a by civil war. A true story that weaves together the history of coffee, the struggles of civil war and the courageous journey of a young man–a Muslim and a U.S. citizen–following the most American of dreams.

Darznik, Jasmin: Song of a Captive Bird. A Novel.

Forugh's poems were considered both scandalous and brilliant. After her death at 32, her poetry was banned, the presses that printed her work burned to the ground, and citizens forced to hide away their collections of her verses. To this day, Forugh Farrokhzad represents the birth of feminism in Iran. Darznik uses the lens of fiction to capture the ecstatic turmoil of this iconic woman's story.

Harper, Jane: Force of Nature.

Five women reluctantly pick up their backpacks and start walking along the muddy track. Only four come out the other side. The hike through the rugged landscape is meant to take the office colleagues out of their air-conditioned comfort zone and teach resilience and team building. Far from the hike encouraging teamwork, the women tell Falk a tale of suspicion, violence and disintegrating trust.

Anderson, Gillian; Nadel, Jennifer: We. A Manifesto for Women Everywhere.

Imagine a sisterhood – across all creeds and cultures. An unspoken agreement that we, as women, will support and encourage one another. That we will remember we don't know what struggles each of us may be facing elsewhere in our lives and so we will assume that each of us is doing our best... So begins WE: an inspiring, empowering and provocative manifesto for change.

Chua, Amy: Political Tribes. Group Instinct and the Fate of Nations.

Humans are tribal. But because America tends to see the world in terms of nation-states engaged in ideological battles, we are often blind to the power of tribal politics. This blindness consistently undermines American foreign policy. If we want to get our foreign policy right, the United States has to come to grips with political tribalism abroad.

Milton, Giles: Churchill's Ministry of Ungentlemanly Warfare. The Mavericks Who Plotted Hitler's Defeat.

In the spring of 1939, a top-secret organization was founded in London: its purpose was to plot the destruction of Hitler's war machine through spectacular acts of sabotage. Giles Milton's Churchill's Ministry of Ungentlemanly Warfare is a gripping and vivid narrative of adventure and derring-do that is also, perhaps, the last great untold story of the Second World War.

Mishra, Pankaj: Age of Anger. A History of the Present. Das Zeitalter des Zorns.

How can we explain the origins of the great wave of paranoid hatreds that seem inescapable in our close-knit world – from American ‚shooters' and ISIS to Trump, from a rise in vengeful nationalism across the world to racism and misogyny on social media? In AGE OF ANGER, Pankaj Mishra answers our bewilderment by casting his gaze back to the eighteenth century, before leading us to the present.

Rydell, Anders: The Book Thieves. The Nazi Looting of Europe's Libraries and the Race to Return a Literary Inheritance.

When the Nazi soldiers ransacked Europe's libraries, large and small, the books they stole were not burned. Instead, the Nazis began to compile a library of their own that they could use to wage an intellectual war. The libraries of Hitler's opposition groups were appropriated for Nazi research, and used as a weapon against their owners. But when the war was over, most of the books were never returned.

Taleb, Nassim Nicholas: Skin in the Game. Hidden Asymmetries in Daily Life.

The English phrase „skin in the game" is one we have often heard but have not stopped to truly dissect. It is an astonishingly complex worldview that, as Taleb shows in this book, applies to literally all aspects of our lives. As Taleb says, „Never trust anyone who doesn't have skin in the game. Without it, fools and crooks will profit and their mistakes will never come back to haunt them."

Rachman, Tom: The Italian Teacher.

What makes an artist? In THE ITALIAN TEACHER, Tom Rachman displays a nuanced understanding of twentieth-century art and its demons, vultures and chimeras. Moreover, in Pinch he achieves a portrait of exacting vulnerability and realism: talent made irrelevant by personality. Stripped of egotism, authenticity or genius, Pinch forces us to face the deep held fear of a life lived in vain.

Eggers, Dave: The Lifters.

What if nothing was as it seemed? What if the ground beneath your feet was not made of solid earth but had been hollowed into tunnels and passageways? What if there were mysterious forces mere inches below you as you sit in class or eat a banana? What if it were up to just two kids to stop these forces? What would it feel like to know the fate of an entire town rested on your shoulders?

Eddo-Lodge, Reni: Why I'm No Longer Talking to White People About Race. LONGLISTED FOR THE BAILLIE GIFFORD PRIZE FOR NON-FICTION.

In 2014, Reni Eddo-Lodge posted an impassioned piece online about her frustration with the way discussions of racism were being shut down by those who weren't affected by it. The post went viral, and Eddo-Lodge decided to dive into the source of these feelings; the result is a searing exploration of what it means to be a person of colour today. This is an essential book by a vital new voice.

Brown, Brené: Rising Strong. The Reckoning. The Rumble. The Revolution.

For Brene, the conversation about vulnerability and shame naturally evolves into a discussion of bravery–its origins, its catalysts, its chemistry. How we are brave. What constitutes bravery. And how to recognize where our own „hero's journey" begins–in the depths of failure, heartbreak, and grief–and how we are able to rise from those depths and determine how we want our story will end.

At the age of twenty-eight, Jessica Lee, who grew up in Canada and lived in London, finds herself in Berlin. Alone. Lonely, with lowered spirits thanks to some family history and a broken heart, she is there, ostensibly, to write a thesis. And though that is what she does daily, what increasingly occupies her is swimming. So she decides she will swim fifty-two of the lakes around Berlin.

Levy, Ariel: The Rules Do Not Apply. A Memoir.

In gorgeous, moving, sharp, unforgettable prose, Levy describes her own ill-fated assumptions: thinking that anything is possible, that the old rules do not apply, that marriage doesn't have to mean monogamy, that aging doesn't have to mean infertility. In telling her own story, Levy captures a portrait of our time, of the shifting forces in American culture, and of how to begin again.

Mahbubani, Kishore: Has the West Lost It? A Provocation.

The West's centuries-old status as the centre of global wealth and power is coming to an end. As the new powers – China and India from Asia and others from Africa and Latin America – rise to the top of the world's pecking order, how should the West react? Kishore Mahbubani argues that only by admitting its decline can the West set itself up for strategic success in the long term.

Murakami, Haruki: Men Without Women. Stories.

This dazzling new collection of short stories is internationally bestselling author Haruki Murakami's first collection for over a decade. Across seven tales, Murakami brings his powers of observation to bear on the lives of men who, in their own ways, find themselves alone. Marked by his wry humour, in this collection Murakami has crafted another contemporary classic.

Christian, David: Origin Story. A Big History of Everything.

David Christian gives the answers in a mind-expanding cosmological detective story told on the grandest possible scale. He traces how during eight key thresholds, the right conditions have allowed new forms of complexity to arise,from stars to galaxies, from Earth to homo sapiens. Thrillingly told, ORIGIN STORY reveals what we learn about human existence when we consider it from a universal scale.

Clarke, Stephen: The French Revolution and What Went Wrong.

An entertaining and eye-opening look at the French Revolution by Stephen Clarke, author of 1000 YEARS OF ANNOYING THE FRENCH and A YEAR IN THE MERDE. In 1789, almost no one in France wanted to oust the king, let alone guillotine him. This book tells us what went wrong – and why France would be better off if they had kept their monarchy.

Courcy, Anne de: The Husband Hunters. Social Climbing in London and New York.

Towards the end of the 19th century and for the first few years of the 20th, a strange invasion took place in Britain. The citadel of power, privilege and breeding in which the titled, land-owning governing class had barricaded itself for so long was breached. The incomers were a group of young American women who, fifty years earlier, would have been looked on as the denizens of another world.

Ford, Richard: Between Them. Remembering my parents. Zwischen ihnen. (Zwischen ihnen)

From the prize-winning author comes a deeply personal account of his parents –an intimate portrait of American mid-twentieth century life, and a celebration of family love. Ford's parents were not practised self-explainers or confiders. He has therefore investigated their lives from anecdote, history and conjecture. Between Them is both a son's act of great love and a searing meditation on family.

Spence, Charles: Gastrophysics. The New Science of Eating.

Why do we consume 35% more food when eating with one more person, and 75% more when with three? Why are 27% of drinks bought on aeroplanes tomato juice? These are just some of the ingredients of GASTROPHYSICS, in which the pioneering Oxford professor Charles Spence shows how our senses link up in the most extraordinary ways. Mealtimes will genuinely never be the same again.

Thomson, Mike: Syria's Secret Library.

The secret library is in the basement of a bombed building in a heavily shelled area of Darayya. While the streets above echo with rifle fire the secret world below is a haven of peace and tranquillity. More than 14,000 books are stacked neatly on home-made shelves. Those within read quietly, drinking tea on comfortable sofas and chairs. A small oasis of normality in a country at war with itself.

MANTLE

International bestselling author Kate Mosse heads to 16th century France for her hotly anticipated, gripping new historical novel,

The Burning Chambers

As the Wars of Religion begin to take hold, a young Catholic girl and a Huguenot believer find themselves in possession of a priceless treasure, and set upon a quest to uncover a long buried secret hidden in the mysterious Chateau de Puivert…

The first novel in the Burning Chambers series. Returning to the setting of Labyrinth, the series will span three centuries, from the massacre of 66 Huguenots outside Carcassonne in 1562, through 17th Century Amsterdam, to exile in the inhospitable valleys outside Cape Town in the 1880s.

Boyd, William: The Dreams of Bethany Mellmoth.

A dazzling collection of short stories from one of Britain's best novelists. The collection depicts the random encounters that bring the past bubbling to the surface; the impulsive decisions that irrevocably shape a life; and the endless hesitations that wickedly complicate it. The funny, surprising and moving stories are a confirmation of Boyd's powers as one of our most original storytellers.

Gay, Roxane: Hunger. A Memoir of (My) Body.

Roxane Gay has written with intimacy and sensitivity about food and bodies, using her own emotional and psychological struggles as a means of exploring our shared anxieties over pleasure, consumption, appearance, and health. As a woman who describes her own body as „wildly undisciplined," Roxane understands the tension between desire and denial and between self-comfort and self-care.
